In the near future, society tends to relinquish willingly shares freedom and privacy in exchange for protection. This is true of a community in the western United States calling itself the Fifty-First State. In this context, a professor of psychology and crawler serial murderers Jeffrey Clayton learns that a wave of killings is plaguing the territory of the west, the only safe area in the United States (in the rest of the country, everyone carries weapons stockpiles over). This news is faced with its dark past. Twenty-five years ago, he, his mother and sister Susan fled his tyrannical father, a suspect in the heinous murder of a young student. Although he was never convicted, ended up committing suicide, or that's what it seemed. Now, with a psychopath to stalking, Susan receives a cryptic and sinister anonymous note that reveals a terrifying message: "We found." Nobody seems safe from intruders. Is the father of Clayton responsible for the killing and harassment of Susan? The authorities and agents of State Security (SS a kind of American-style) so believe, and are lodged with Jeffrey with the intention that he found the person responsible for the deaths, his father.
